John Alvin Orr, of the New World Movement, is the pastor of the First United Presbyterian church of Union Avenue, North Side, Pittsburgh, Pa. Born in Cedarville, Ohio, 1874, of Scotch-Irish ancestry, he was reared in an excellent Christian home and united with the church when 14 years old. He taught in the Sabbath school of the church and worked in the Young People's society. He graduated from the Cedarville high school in 1893, entered the University of Wooster (Ohio) in the autumn of 1893 and entered Cedarville college in the autumn of 1894. Here he graduated in 1897 with the degree of A. B. He took post graduate work in the University of Pennsylvania for three years, obtaining the degree of arts in 1899. Part of his seminary course was taken in the Reformed Presbyterian seminary in Philadelphia. He graduated from the Pittsburgh theological seminary in 1901. He was called to the pastorate of the North Side Presbyterian church in June, 1901, and remained there twelve years. Then he was called to the First U. P. Presbyterian church of the North Side, Pittsburgh. One of the outstanding achievements of that church during Dr. Orr's pastorate was the erection of a beautiful community house in 1916.

Dr. Orr was made a member of the Board of Education of the church in 1916, and was elected chairman of the New World Movement central committee in June, 1919.

In 1902 Dr. Orr was united in marriage to Miss Ina Roderick, of Selma, Ohio. They now reside in the Perryville avenue district, in Pittsburgh.

Cameramen Picture News Events of the Day

Strikes, flood and waste are the high spots of news events for the week. The flood picture is an exclusive photo of the terrible havoc wrought at Corpus Christi, Texas, when the hurricane lashed Gulf waters virtually submerged the town, resulting in heavy loss of life. Galveston, Brownsville and many other towns also suffered immense losses. The strike picture is from Gary, Ind., where steel mill workers, by the thousands are out on strike. Both steel worker leaders and steel mill

LOOKING FOR LANDING PLACE.

The Republican leaders in Congress are looking for a landing place seeing that disaster faces this country unless there is a reduction in the cost of operating our government. It is to be the policy of party leaders to do this. The same plan must be adopted in the state where ten millions are now required for the budget of two years. When the state tax authorities order a revaluation of real estate in Greene county and some of this $200 land listed for its value, value, the tax authorities would not object to the increased land values so much were present prices to continue. With the concentrated drive to lower prices it means that the farmer's product is to suffer first. The future is very uncertain in this country due to the unrest. We cannot continue creating public offices in the state without increasing the tax rate or the land values for taxation. When we see the many counties appropriating $10,000 to start the first year of the new health law it make one stagger at the state spending between eight hundred thousand and one million dollars a year for a new health machine that cannot possibly be any more efficient than the old boards of health that served gratis. In every county so far organized that we have read of plans have been made to put the cities in the county in the new organization so that the farmers can be taxed to support this law. The same plan is working under cover in this county.

WHAT TAX LAWS DO.

We notice in most of the large city daily papers the advertisement of a financial institution that is inviting Ohio money into that state where the tax rates are much lower than in Ohio. The industries of Kentucky have a lighter tax rate. Each class of property is taxed according to its ability to earn. Of the entire tax revenues of the state land taxes have been reduced from 70 per cent to 67. Such a condition in a neighboring state should be a warning to the tax payers of Ohio. Money driven from the state by unjust tax laws is against the banks in Ohio and will in time create a money shortage.

James A. Chew Is Peeved; Brings Injunction Suit

County Auditor Faulkner and Herald Editor are Defendants—Chew May Face Criminal Charge for Falsifying an Account Against Public Funds.

An unusual injunction suit was brought in Common Pleas Court, Monday, by James A. Chew of the Chew Publishing Co., Xenia, against A. E. Faulkner, county auditor, and Karl Bull, publisher of the Herald.

Each year the auditor is compelled under the law to publish what is known as the "Auditor's Detail Statement", showing expenditures of the county.

The Gazette has had this statement for years back but for the past two years has been charged by the auditor, and backed up by the State Bureau of Accounting, with padding in order to draw more money out of the county treasury.

Mr. Chew's bills are still on file in the auditor's office and the padded portion of the bill is still unpaid as Mr. Faulkner would not recognize the illegal claim.

This year Mr. Faulkner turned the detailed statement over to the Herald for publication and it was accepted as a business proposition. Anger arose in Mr. Chew's person when he learned what had been done and his emissary, a member of the Gazette staff, called upon Mr. Faulkner, and endeavored to influence him to call in the copy and turn it over to the Gazette. Mr. Faulkner stood ground and refused to change his position. The Gazette representative failing to land the copy by peaceful argument then openly threatened the auditor that unless he took such action stringent means would be taken to get it. Mr. Faulkner still refused and was then informed that unless he did the Gazette's bidding, while it had not been the policy of the paper, it would not hesitate to attack him not only politically but personally. Mr. Faulkner's answer to this threat was not an invitation to proceed but so far as he has not been done.

The following day the Gazette's representative again tried his hand in his endeavor to force Mr. Faulkner to withdraw the copy but failure was met again. The representative took another tack and wanted the matter closed up without any trouble. He promised Mr. Faulkner that all the expense the Herald had been put to would be paid by the Gazette and that if Mr. Chew had at any time said or done anything offensive to Mr. Faulkner, he was willing to make amends by a personal apology. Still Mr. Faulkner declined to change his position and the result was that Mr. Chew brought the injunction suit, which for the time being has tied up the publication of the report.

One of the allegations in the petition is that the Herald is not a Republican paper; another that it is not of general circulation.

The Republican leaders are at a quandary as to what constitutes a Republican paper. The Gazette while sailing under this banner, forced the Republicans to pay for its support of the ticket the last campaign. The managers of the campaign state that the cost was not nominal but excessive, and that the Gazette has no claim on the party for favors.

The campaign for the common pleas judges, a better form of government for the city, had to be used through the purchase of space. Prominent leaders and merchants of the city have been outspoken of the Gazette's policy.

In the suit prosecuting Attorney Harry D. Smith will represent Mr. Faulkner while Judge Shoup will represent the Herald. Mr. Chew is represented by Frank L. Johnson.

Should the Herald follow friendly, as well as legal advice, we can retaliate against Mr. Chew on a charge of falsifying an account against public funds, which is a criminal offense under the laws of the state.

REGULAR COUNCIL MEETING

Stewart and Mitchell casting the negative votes. The salary of mayor was fixed at $150; clerk, $150; marshal, $80; council $2 a meeting and not exceed two meetings a month. Treasurer, two per cent on the amount disbursed.

WATER IS STAGNANT.

The water in the creek is very stagnant, in fact it is about the worst that we have had for several years. It has been many months since we have had a rain sufficient to wash down the channel, which no doubt accounts for the presence of so many mosquitoes this late in the season. A heavy frost will sent the visitors to winter quarters.

Clark, Clifton, and stealing clothing to the value of $7.25. He was indicted for burglary and larceny. The only other case on the docket was against H. E. Schmidt, who was charged with threatening Chaney Neil of the Grand Hotel. Neil failed to appear and the case was dropped.

SUGAR WILL SOAR.

Sugar is more in demand and hard to find now than during the war. Those in position to know say that it will be 20 cents a pound by the first of the year. Cuban sugar has been taken over by the foreign governments while the sugar board at Washington was asleep at the switch.

WEAVER CHOSEN PRESIDENT

C. A. Weaver, prominent clothier of Xenia, has been chosen as president of the new Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Weaver is a successful businessman, a director of the Xenia National Bank, and the right man to head the new organization in his city.

Entered at the Post-Office, Cedarville, O., October 21, 1917, as second class matter.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 19, 1919.

A radical seems to be one who can't see the other side.

Every strike hits the dollar on the head and stuns it a cent or two.

The war is over but what is the administration in Washington doing to provide sugar for the people?

There are a few men in every community whose single purpose is to lead a double life.

Too many men spend their money before they see it and of course find that is not enough when the pay envelope is handed them.

A vote for the extra road tax next month means more than good roads. Good roads are what helps to keep up the price of farm land.

Beginning next January Uncle Sam will have all the people in this nation listed and counted. It will require a 100,000 persons to take the census, which is required every ten years.

It is impossible for the town to make much greater progress unless we get more dwellings. Each day we hear of people hunting residences.

A few Republicans and Democrats in Congress that would not fear the union vote, and the labor situation could be settled.

Solve the transportation problems of the country and you will go a long way towards restoring business to a normal condition.

Senator Harding's speech as reported in the National Republican on the League of Nations is all the proof that is necessary that this nation does not want the league as it stands.

It pays to be a labor leader as is proven by the value of the estate of the late John Mitchell, former head of the union miners. The estate is valued at $240,000.

The government is offering several million horse and mule shoes for sale. Why not sell the thousands of automobiles that are stored. There are several hundred stored at the Ohio State Fair Grounds in Columbus.

Senator Reed received the rotten egg treatment out in his state when he attempted to speak against the league plan. While many approve of the Senator's stand now they have not forgotten his position early in the war.

Senator Warren G. Harding of this state issued a statement that takes him out of the list of presidential possibilities. He will be a candidate for re-election as senator. We know of no man mentioned by the Republicans for president that is more able or more worthy of this high honor.

The Democratic administration cannot get consolation in the result of a recent congressional election in the Seventh Alabama district which President Wilson carried by 4600. The Republican nominee carried the district by 75. Democratic waste of funds has evidently sickened the populace in the south that always has stood by its party.

The National Republican hits the nail on the head in a lengthy editorial insisting on Republicans in Congress should resist the present governmental expenditures and waste of public money. This year's appropriations will aggregate six billion dollars, or about $250 for every family in the United States. The example of waste in Washington has spread to every part of the nation.

INTERMEDIATE TOPIC--The work of a disciple.
SENIOR AND ADULT TOPIC--Ways of winning men to Christ.

I. Jesus Preaching in Galilee (vv. 14, 15).
The reason why he changed from Judea to Galilee was the growing opposition to him. The fate of John the Baptist he accepted as foreshadowing his own death. The rejection of the forerunner meant the rejection of him whose advent he heralded. Prudence moved him to a more remote region, where he would attract less attention and be free from opposition. Besides this it gave less favored people an opportunity to hear the gospel, according to the prophetic word (Isa. 9:1, 2). It foreshadowed the gospel to the Gentiles.
1. What he preached (v. 14). The gospel of the Kingdom of God, which meant the good news of the near approach of the Kingdom of God, when the rule of God as predicted by the prophets would be realized. It should be carefully noted that the gospel of the Kingdom differs from the gospel of the grace of God.
2. How he preached (v. 15). (1) "The time is fulfilled." The Kingdom of God is at hand. This meant that the time had now come for the appearance of the Messiah and the establishment of his kingdom. (2) "Repent."

This meant that the people should turn around, change their minds and attitude toward Christ the King and accept him as their King. This is a message which needs to be sounded out today. People should be called upon to repent of their sins. (3) "Believe the gospel." Then, as now, men need to believe the gospel of Christ's death for their sins and resurrection for justification (1 Cor. 15:1-4; Rom. 4:25).
II. Jesus Calling Disciples to Become Fishers of Men (vv. 16-20).
1. Who were called (vv. 16, 17). Simon and Andrew, John and James, two pairs of brothers. It is usually best to render the Lord's service in fellowship with others. This is not only necessary for effective testimony, but for needed fellowship on the part of workers and protection of the witnesses. These all had previously been called to Christ for salvation; they had become his disciples (John 1:35-42). They are now called to service. This is always his way. We are first called to be disciples, then called to have fellowship with him in service.
2. From what they were called (vv. 16, 20). They were called from positions of definite service. God always chooses his servants from the ranks of the employed. The lazy man is not likely to have a call.
3. To what they were called (v. 17). To be "fishers of men." They no doubt had been successful fishers. The qualities which made them good fishers, namely, patience, bravery to face the storm and night, and perseverance which led them to toil all night, though no fish were caught, would make them good fishers of men. It requires patience, bravery and perseverance to win souls for Christ.
4. Their call to obedience (vv. 18, 20). To obey meant sacrifice, painful separation, to give up all business interests and leave their father behind. Regardless of the cost, they yielded prompt obedience. They gave up business and home, not even inquiring as to where their salaries were to come from. They put their trust in him who called them, believing that he was able to supply all their needs.
5. Their reward (v. 17). These four men have wielded wondrous influence in the world. Their names have become immortalized. Had they remained at their business they would only have been humble workmen. When Christ calls let us promptly obey, for eventually it will pay. It will yield one hundredfold in this life, and eternal life in the world to come.

Preaching the Gospel.
If the church is to reach the masses of the people it will have to send, as did the prophets and apostles, fit men to tell the glorious gospel of the grace of God. What is more, those who cannot do this work will have to support and encourage those of the church are: "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature."
"For Thee."
With all the salvation of the world depending upon him, he has time and thought for each individual soul. Think of the vastness of his cares! yet the body of our Lord Jesus Christ was given for thee--Selected.
Contagious of Heaven.
There ought to be such an atmosphere in every Christian church that a man going and sitting there should take the contagion of heaven, and carry home a fire to kindle the altar whence he came.--H. W. Beecher.
Bible's Place in the World.
Bacon furnishes more than seventy allusions to the Bible in twenty-four of his essays. Addison, Johnson, Pope, Young, Browning, Tennyson, abound in Scripture. "For more than 1,000 years" says Coleridge, "the Bible, taken collectively, has gone hand in hand with civilization, science, law, in short, with the moral and intellectual cultivation of the species, always supporting and often leading the way."
Wonderful is Writ.
"Oh, Mr. Turenne-Dovne," exclaimed Stuyvesant N. Schibbole, "I will admit that my technique may permit of slight improvement, but you must concede that I have a wonderful imagination." "You certainly have, young man," returned the quincy fiction editor, "if you imagine you can sell your book to me."

We are the weakest of spendthrifts if we let one friend drop off through inattention, or let one push away another, or if we hold aloof from one for petty jealousy, or needless roughness. 2.75% Beer is Intoxicating

It will make drunkards, it will produce crime and poverty. VOTING that it is NOT intoxicating does not alter the case nor change the fact one whit.

FEDERAL GOVERNMENT AUTHORITIES SAY liquor containing alcohol in excess of one-half of one per cent is intoxicating. If you vote that 2.75 per cent beer is not intoxicating (as the brewers want you to) you permit the sale of this 2.75 per cent booze as every street corner, for it will be in a class with soft drinks. Do not be misled; the liquor barons would not strive for a 2.75 per cent beer unless it was intoxicating. Beer without booze isn't it what they want.

The kind they want is the kind that has the kick, the kind that enervates, the kind that creates an appetite.

Vote against 2.75 per cent Beer.

This is one of the various proposals of the Beer crowd upon which you will vote "NO."

HOW TO VOTE DRY

There are TWO separate ballots on the wet and dry question with TWO propositions on each ballot.

On the short ballot, vote "No" on Article XV, Section 2-1.

Vote "Yes" also on Article XV, Section 2-1.

On the long ballot, vote "Yes" on Senate Joint Resolution No. 4, (ratifying National Prohibition).

Vote "Yes" also on Senate Joint Resolution No. 4, (providing for law enforcement).

HARDING'S GREAT LEAGUE SPEECH

A Counter-Vision to That of President Wilson.

NATIONALISM IS EXALTED

The Senator From Ohio Was Chosen by the Leaders to Make the Statesman's Appeal For Changes In the World Covenant and Furnishes the Philosophy of the Present Acute Crisis.

Washington, D.C., (Special).—Senator Warren G. Harding made a remarkable address when the League of Nations covenant was reported to the senate by the foreign relations committee. It was an unanswerable appeal for the preservation of the nationality of the American people. In a safeguarded United States, Senator Harding not only saw the welfare of our own country, but he saw the world and of humanity guaranteed. The address, which was heard with profound attention by a crowded senate and greeted with sincere applause, began with the thought that all America desired the furtherance of peace and a maintained tranquility for the world. The practical problem was how to wisely bring this about.

America came out of the war in a magnificent advantageous position. She had turned the scales and achieved victory. Yet she asked not one iota of the spoils of war. Unfortunately this was not so with other nations.

Said Senator Harding:

What Europe Asks.

Empires and sovereign states, autocratic, imperial, or democratic, had fought and sacrificed and bargained and covenanted and they craved peace and we craved peace. But they wanted annexations and extensions and creations, and they wanted this republic with its resources—the wealth of men and material—to guarantee the changes they had wrought, and wanted the United States of America in their unsolicited aid to guarantee the perpetuity of the selfishness of the Old World.

They had nothing to offer us but the phantom of things, taking the shape of the image of peace, a promise deeply appealing to the aspirations of ourselves and the world, for tranquility and the happiness of war. And we bargained for it, and then they fashioned it into a reality, suited to serve Europe and the Orient as the seal of righteousness on all to which the allied powers had agreed.

Moral Obligations Sacred.

We have heard much lately about "moral obligations." When a thing is covenanted it is difficult for me to distinguish between moral and legal obligation. For this republic, either by treaty or by solemnly binding. The nation which ignores either is losing the conscience which is essential to self-respect and respect for nations. It was Germany's contempt for a "scrap of paper" that made her an outcast in the eyes of the civilized world.

There has been a curious conflict of meaning in the use of the word "moral." When senators, speaking in this chamber in defense of the league covenant found opposition developing to the powers conveyed in article 10, they hastened to say the council's call to war, armed or economic, in defense of any member was no binding—"only a moral obligation." In the recorded conference between members of the foreign relations committee and the president it was declared by the president that we were not bound to go to war on recommendation of the council, that there was "only a moral obligation" on us to go to war in defense of a member nation, or it means nothing at all. If it leaves any member nation free to exercise its own judgment as to the merits of any attack, it does not guarantee the territorial integrity or peace of any nation. It is worse than phantom; it is the thing that lures nations thirsting for peace to the very desert of cruel destruction. The pity of it is that no reservation will cure the ill. Without the power which is clearly expressed, "the league is a rope of sand," as the senator from Connecticut described it, and with the power established, as it must be to make the league effective, we have surrendered our own freedom of action to a council whose members will represent the prejudices, ambitions, hatreds and jealousies of the Old World, or to the assembly, where we are outvoted 3 to 1 by Great Britain and her colonies, and we still remain a party to the racial, geographical and inherited enmities of Europe and the Orient.

Sympathy For Armenia.

Does any thinking man stop to measure the colossal and endless involvement before which the altruistic unselfishness and most confident altruism must falter? Contemplate for a moment only the vast territory of Armenia. It is very apparent to me that the woes, the outrages, the massacres, the awakenings of the Armenians, and visualize the doubts and distresses and sacrifices lived while the senate waited. I know the appeal that touches the heart of Christian America in its concern and sympathy for Armenia. It easily may be made to seem as if the sympathetic son of God had turned to the Omnipotent Father to send this twentieth-century defender to the New Testament to succor those stricken believers in the great Trinity. But the big, warning truth is little proclaimed. Our armies—sons of this republic, the youths from American homes—are wanted there. Armenia calls and Great Britain is urging, including A hundred thousand soldiers are needed. More American soldiers for Armenia than we heretofore maintained under the flag in any the years of peace. Answer the call and we station this American army at the gateway between Orient and Occident, to become involved in every conflict of the Old World, and our splendid isolation becomes a memory and our boasted peace a mockery. This is not the way to peace. This is the way to warring war.

Safety Should Begin at Home.

Mr. President, I am not insensible to the sufferings of Armenia, nor am I deaf to the walls forced by the cruelties of barbarity wherever our ideals of civilization are not maintained. But I am thinking of America first. Safety as well as charity, begins at home. Selfishness? No. It is self-preservation.

Measured as our resources are, large as our man power is, and chivalrous as our purpose may be, we are not strong enough to assume sponsorship for all the oppressed of the world. No people, no nation is strong enough for such a supreme responsibility. We have the republic to preserve. And in the very program of needless assumption, in some instances home-coming on presumption, we are endangering our own republic. It is not alone the abandonment of security, so much feared against by the founding fathers, which suggests alarm. I am thinking of divided citizenship at home that must attend our attempted reorganization of the world.

The Curse of Hyphenism.

We are restoring hyphenism under internationalism.

One can not complain at the revelation, but I am lamenting the cause. It is all directly traceable to our assumption of world sponsorship. One can little blame the American of Italian origin for being concerned about those bound by ties of blood, or the American of Greek origin for deep feelings about the fate of those of his kind in Thrace, or criticize the American son of the Old World who finds in his heart an undying echo of the Irish cry for freedom. Instead of affecting the native interest, instead of merging the individual soul in exclusive Americanism, we have already embarked on a program that awakens every racial pride, every Old World prejudice, every inherited aspiration, and are readying the conflict of American spirit, which once promised to be the great compensation for all our sacrifices.

This is no idle fancy. Justice, only justice, and liberty, God's demand, of liberty, wars on every line, and there was no perfunctory utterance among those who appealed to the senate that they were committed. There was deep feeling in what was said, and that sincerity for which men die, and as I listened, I deplored the absence of a speech, unperformed, which leads hope to flame high, then die in disappointment. And, Mrs. I doubly deplored the proposals and promises that open anew the cleavage in the confidence of our adopted American citizenship.

Vigorous Americanism Lacking.

Must we have this particular covenant to save us from European broils and old-world conflicts, as the president asserted? In a hundred years of American development and growing influence no war involved us, though 125 wars are recorded in that period. We were not involved in 1893; we went because conscience was impelling. I quite agree that Germany might have preferred to respect our rights than to involve us in the late war, but I believe we would have answered affront with armed defense, but the president was too busy then keeping us out of war to utter a vigorous American warning. Germany held us in a contempt which our instant American voice in authority might have dissolved, but we delayed until 2,000,000 fighting sons of the republic shot Germany to respectful understanding.

An Overwhelmed Power.

If this league as negotiated can do all that its proponents have promised, it can tighten its grip on the destiny of nations and make our inspiring nationality a reality. Extravagant utterance? Well, establish the council without strong reservations protecting our freedom of action, and establish the assembly with its powers unimpaired by reservations, and no man can foresee the exercise of authority by the league of great powers, against whom small nations will protest in vain.

Suppose it proves all that is claimed in discouraging war, which many honestly doubt. Let me say in passing that the assembly, the highest officer of the army, stalwart in his Americanism and his love of country, whose devotion has been proven again and again, and who not only fought in the late war but is a student of European affairs, said to me not a month ago: "Senator, as a military man I ought to favor this league because it means war after war and constant activity in the work for which I am trained. But I pray in my American heart you will never permit us to it, because I can see involvements and regrets unending."

But suppose it makes for the promised peace, I still prefer, and the great majority of Americans still prefer, to be the keepers of our national conscience and let Europe pass upon its moral obligations while we righteously meet our own.

To what conclusion am I leading? Speeches are made alone, voting no faction, no group, no party, I do not see how any senator can decide upon his final vote till the disputed amendments.

Knocking on Wood.

The superstition of rapping on wood after a host of a piece of luck is of European origin. The raps were supposed to drive away evil spirits vexed by others' good fortune. The raps later signified the Trinity, and the necessity for rapping on wood was because that was the material of the cross. The expression dates from a custom in vogue five thousand years ago.

SENATOR HARDING'S SPEECH

...and proposed reservations shall have the stamp of the decision of a majority, I can never vote to ratify without safeguards. I am not persuaded to cast a ratifying vote without amendments. I have listened to the committee's earnest discussions. There was no fixed program of action in advance. I have sought to retain a fairly open mind, without any unfavorable prejudice in the face of the charge of wabbling indecision.

Amendments Should Be Adopted.

I mean to vote for the amendments proposed by the committee. They ought to be adopted. If the president is correct in declaring the proposed reservations will send the treaty back, then amendments will not be made. I suppose there is a delay. Civilized peoples are not supposed to move unthinkingly in creating the surpassing covenant of all the ages. This is an epoch-making treaty, no matter what its terms prescribe.

America need not fear the ill-will of our allies. The greatest need for our co-operation is not so critical as when the German armies were battering the western battle fronts, but Europe needs us infinitely more than we need Europe. The aftermath of war is little less difficult than the problems of war itself. We can carry the banner of America to the new Bysium, even though we have to find them before we enter.

It is well to do any job right. It is imperative to do a mighty job right, especially when it involves the fate of all civilization. It is the world to start all over. It ought to start with the square deal. The treaty has not been written for the square deal, but it is reserved for informal promises and promises in the supreme document. Through we performed a great service in armed battling for preserved civilization, we have yet a greater service to render to the same civilization by making the covenant of peace everlastingly righteous.

All fair men realize the embarrassment incident to the Shantung award. Perhaps we can not change it. No one believes we mean to go to war to restore to China what Germany looted and Japan traded for. But we need not be a party to an international immorality that challenges our every utterance about lofty purposes and the reign of justice. I want it recorded for all the world to read, that America esteems her unarmed friend no less than she respects her armed associate.

Delay Is Not Dangerous.

If reservations are to send the German treaty and league covenant back, we ought to amend fully, we ought to write into the text the things which America is thinking. There has been inclination to yield some points rather than necessitate prolonged delay. We now know there are to be reservations, unimpaired reservations, else there will be no treaty. They must speak in clear terms. The covenant is unthinkable without them.

These reservations must be strong and unimpeachable. I could not more support "mild" reservations than I could sanction mild amendments. These reservations come of a purpose to protect America first, and still save a framework on which to build intelligent co-operation. The reservations come of a desire to offer opportunity for a clearing house for the consciences of peoples. These maintain our own peace, and are willing to encourage Europe's effort toward the great desideratum. But in these reservations there must be no surrender of the basic things on which this nation was built to the present-day height of world eminence.

The Conscience of the Republic. Without the amendments we shall be remiss in uttering the conscience of the republic; without strong reservations we shall be recumbent to duty. This is not the universal thought. There is dispute about it being the majority thought of the American millions, but I believe it will become the universal judgment of America. If such a course delays reconstruction, let reconstruction wait. It awaits.

at the same time, it is a matter of course that the world is not a perfect place. There are many things that we can do to make it a better place. We can do it by the use of our hands and our brains. We can do it by the use of our hearts and our souls. We can do it by the use of our strength and our courage. We can do it by the use of our wisdom and our justice. We can do it by the use of our love and our mercy. We can do it by the use of our faith and our hope. We can do it by the use of our charity and our kindness. We can do it by the use of our patience and our gentleness. We can do it by the use of our meekness and our lowliness. We can do it by the use of our humility and our simplicity. We can do it by the use of our purity and our holiness. We can do it by the use of our peace and our quietness. We can do it by the use of our joy and our gladness. We can do it by the use of our love and our mercy. We can do it by the use of our faith and our hope. We can do it by the use of our charity and our kindness. We can do it by the use of our patience and our gentleness. We can do it by the use of our meekness and our lowliness. We can do it by the use of our humility and our simplicity. We can do it by the use of our purity and our holiness. We can do it by the use of our peace and our quietness. We can do it by the use of our joy and our gladness.

Danger to Souls, Not Hearts. I do not believe, senators, that it is going to break the heart of the world to make this covenant right, or at least free from perils which would endanger our own independence. But it was better to witness the rhetorical tragedy than destroy the soul of this great republic. It is a very stirring thing, Mr. President, to do what the world has never done before. No republic has permanently survived. They have flashed, illumined and advanced the world, and faded or crumbled. I want to be a contributor to the abiding republic. None of us today can be sure that it shall abide for generations to come, but we may hold it unshaken for our day, and pass it on to the next generation preserved in its integrity. This is the unending call of duty to men of every civilization. It is distinctly the American call to duty to every man, who believes we have come the nearest to dependable popular government the world has yet witnessed.

American Citizenship. Let us have an America walking erect, unafraid, concerned about its rights and ready to defend them, proud of its citizens and committed to defend them, and sure of its ideals and strong to support them. We are a hundred millions and more today, and if the miracle of the first century of national life may be repeated in the second, the millions of today will be the millions of the future. I like to think, sirs, that out of the discovered soul of the republic and through our preservative actions in this supreme moment of human progress we shall hold the word American the proudest boast of citizenship in all the world.

The King Clermont

The Great Coal Saver

Heats by radiation and convection, saving one-third the fuel bill. In the King Clermont the products of combustion instead of passing directly from the fire-bowl into the chimney, pass into the upper chamber of the flue back; they are then drawn down to the base of the stove before passing up the smoke flue. Three times as much fire travel as on any other make of stove besides this extra amount of radiating surface, the King Clermont heats by circulation, pulling the cold air off the floor and forcing hot air out at the top of the stove; in this way the air is kept in constant circulation, warming the most remote corner of the room. Two sizes—

This Rug is a Good Buy

READ THE FACTS!

"Oh, my dear professor," cried the fond mother, "don't you feel that my daughter's piano technique is marvelous?" "Madam," responded the truthful though diplomatic professor, "I can say that in all my experience I have never seen a pupil who could turn her music over with greater expression, or who can perform the tests so feelingly."

"How is Jibweg getting along?" "He tells me he is having a great deal of trouble keeping a book," "Why, I thought he married a graduate of one of the most noted schools of domestic science in the country?" "So he did, but you ought to know that there are a great many people in this world who don't make any use of an education after they get it!"—Birmingham Age-Herald.

First Automobile.
There has been considerable discussion as to who built the first automobile, but it is generally admitted that no one man can be given the credit, as the automobile is the result of work along the line for more than three centuries. The first horseless carriages, as they were called, were very crude and quite unlike the modern automobile.

As to Democracy.
If democracy means that any man may help who can, that school and university will give every man and woman the fairest chance, the most generous inducement to help, to do the thing he can best do under the best conditions, then, yes; but if democracy means getting up a riot and boycott among the stupid and lazy and illiterate whenever anything is doing, then I say no!—H. G. Wells.

Bennett's Premonition.
There's no end of merry anecdotes of the whimsicalities of the late James Gordon Bennett, editor of the New York Herald. Once he directed that a reporter be sent every night to the man who put his head between the lion's jaws until the lion bit it off. The reporter covered his assignment for more than 100 performances without having anything to report. Finally he took a night off. That night the lion took a bite.—Boston Globe.

Struck by Similarity.
Little Ella was out shopping with her mother one day, and as they passed all the millinery shops she noticed the names on the windows. Almost all the windows that Little Ella noticed had the word Mme. before the name. She became puzzled and at last she said: "Mother, why are all the millinery ladies' names Mme.?"

Optimistic Thought.
After a season of sport the mind prepared to resume its studies with increased vigor.
